Audit | Recommend | Implement

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) comes into force on 25 May 2018 and overhauls data protection law in the UK. The new legislation places greater emphasis on compliance with data protection.

The GDPR will affect all businesses. It places greater prominence than before on documenting compliance with security, sharing and retention of data. Businesses must be able to demonstrate how they are complying with their obligations if requested to do so by the Information Commissioner.

Failure to comply with the GDPR can lead to extremely heavy financial penalties as well as court action from individuals affected by any breach of data security. With only a few months left until implementation, it is vital that you understand your obligations, that your systems are audited, agreements with those with whom you share your data and internal and external policy documentation are put in place.

Audit

Our self-service questionnaire helps to identify the current position with regard to your data; e.g. where is it stored? Who is it shared with? How is it processed? Who has access? How do you rectify and erase data? Upon completion, we identify levels of compliance and areas of risk for the business.

Recommend

After the audit stage, we prepare a report outlining our recommendations as to what action you should take to achieve compliance with GDPR. We will provide suggestions on policies and procedures that you should consider implementing.

Implement

Following on from our recommendations, we can help you to achieve full compliance through policy documentation including for your staff, data processors, dealing with subject access requests, data retention, and customer consent / privacy.
